A Workingman Among Savages.

We will suppose a race of unwarlike savages, living on an island where loaves and roast mutton grew upon all the trees, and where the climate was so delightful that there was need for neither roof nor clothing. Under such conditions civilization would be impossible. Conditions somewhat similar actually do exist, and under these civilization is impossible. The reason is plain. We have said that the people are savages—that is, they are motivated by those wants only which are inseparable from all animal life. They are motivated by the want to eat and the want to reproduce their species. Both these they can satisfy with next to no labor; at all events, there is no place for effort, and thus most of their life consists of a painless leisure. Nevertheless, they do not employ this leisure in producing luxuries that shall supplement their necessities. Labor is impossible to them. They are no more capable of producing wealth than they would be had they neither hands nor muscles. Their island is rich, we will suppose, in coal and in metals; but they sink no shafts, build no furnaces, smelt no iron. And why? There is no want to compel them to do so. A man who is always sure of sufficient to eat, who suffers nothing for want of either shelter or clothing, who has never seen or heard of wealth, or dreamed of the attractions it might hold out to him—such a man will be incapable of any painful exertion, he will be incapable of raising himself, and so will a nation of such men. Let us suppose, however, that a stranger arrives to our island, who contrives by some means or other to possess himself of all the bread and of all the legs of mutton, and, withdrawing them for a single day, makes the people feel the pangs of hunger. In a single day energy is created. The thing that was not, is. Now we have arms and hands and intelligence, endowed on a sudden with power and activity, and ready to be guided and partly informed by the intelligence of him who can give or withhold food. Now the helpless, indolent, nerveless savages become strong, industrious men. They have been transfigured and made different beings by this one agency—the agency of want, with the prospect of having their want satisfied. Thus they are perfectly pliant to their despot's will—the will of the man who is the irresponsible dispenser of food. He sets them first to one labor, then to another; he teaches them various arts. Metals are worked, roads are made, a palace is built for him, and filled with furniture and all manner of luxuries; his food is served up to him in new and delicate ways; he is waited upon by a retinue of servants. What then has happened to the community during this process? It has one very rich man in it; all the rest are poor. But is it poorer than it was originally? In no way. The people originally had as much food as they could eat. That was their only riches. They have as much food now. The only difference is that before they receive it they are forced to employ the time they once wasted.—Malloch, in Contemporary Review.

THOMAS CARLYLE wrote as follows fifty years ago: "As to writing—for the present I will neither advise nor dissuade you. If you have any heartfelt interest in any literary matter, any idea that gives you no rest until it be uttered—commit it to paper, and, if circumstances favor, to the press, the sooner the better. Only if you have no such interest, no such idea, do not in any wise regard it as a misfortune (most probably it is a blessing, for the sweetest of fruit is longest in ripening); but simply as a sign that your vocation as yet is not to impart, but to acquire."

An Angel Fish Caught.

An angel fish, said to be the first even brought to this city, was caught with a hook and line by some Italian fishermen twenty miles outside of Farallon Islands in very deep water brought into the city and sold to an enterprising tobacco dealer on Montgomery street, where it was hung up in the window to excite the wonderment of passers-by. The specimen is about three and a half feet long, has a head as large as a man's, beneath which are a pair of wing-like fins, spreading out over two feet from tip to tip, from the lower extremity of the wings—they are much more like wings than fins—and the body tapers off to a small tail. The back of the fish is a dark gray and brownish color, slightly mottled and studded with sharp, thorn-like protuberances. The under side of the fish presents a most curious appearance, being colored and shaped from the neck down the entire body like a human body. The thorax is rib-marked and the abdomen is singularly man-like, and the resemblance to the human organization is very remarkable. The novelty and rarity of the specimen drew to the store where it is exhibited a number of scientists.

Charles Wolcott Brooks informed the Call reporter sent to make the fish's acquaintance that the one brought in by the Italians is a very rare specimen. It has heretofore been scientifically classed, but not generally known as a personal acquaintance, so to say, by even the most favored few. Mr. Brooks stated that the squatina, speaking of it in a friendly manner, is a habitue of very deep water, where it pursues the very pleasant pastime of feeding on flounders and soles. Unlike San Francisco bon vivantes the squatina is never forced to accept a slice of sturgeon for a sole and pay two bits for it. Yet the squatina appears capable of mastering even a whole sturgeon, having a true fissure mouth fracturing its enormous head from the two joints where its ears should have been set.—San Francisco Call.

How Mining Will Surely Pay.

"No; no hoisting works—not if I know it. You can fool away a good deal of good, hard coin on hoisting works." "How in thunder do you run your mine?" "On the assessment plan, sir. That's the latest and most approved method. When we have a good map of the lower workings we don't need any works to speak of. I keep a man in Virginia at $60 a month to superintend the location and write weekly letters, and I stay in San Francisco, in my office on Pine street, and levy the assessments every sixty days; that's as often as the law allows. I am the President, Board of Trustees, Secretary, Treasurer, and everything—more especially the Treasurer. Of course I draw salary for all the offices, and when I get through drawing salaries I turn the rest over to the agent in Virginia to pay off the hands; he saves enough to pay himself. This is what I call scientific mining, sir. You get the silver out of the pockets of the stockholders and leave the vast argentiferous and auriferous deposits in your claim for your children, who can go right ahead and develop the mine just as soon as the public quit putting up, which isn't at all likely to happen. As long as people are being born in Nevada and California my mine will run on like a chronometer clock." "But," said the Utah man, "my style of mining keep lots of men at work." "So does mine," quoth the Golden Gate chap. "Thousands of men are working night and day to pay the assessments." It keeps the country as busy as a beehive, and the speaker sauntered to the telegraph office to order assessment No. 86.—Denver News.

COUNTY POINTS.

WASHINGTON.

Edward Larkin had his collar bone broken by falling from a loaded wagon a few days ago.

There was quite a number of visitors here last week to enliven our town.

Miss Lucy Durrett entertained Misses Johnson and Richardson, of Maysville. Miss Nellie Wood has Miss May Morgan, of Maysville, visiting her. She will remain several days.

Robert Barnes, the tobacco fly exterminator, of Orangeburg, has been here several times lately selling a contrivance for getting rid of flies.

Miss Jennie Downing was in Orangeburg last week visiting relatives at that place.

Our bewitching little friend, Jennie Wood, is enjoying herself this week with her cousin, Miss Bessie Morgan, of your city.

Be bald headed and you will be happy exclaimed one of our elderly ladies the other day as she read Heathcote's bold allusion to the slippery pates of our bachelor friends. Since then one of them has had collars hemmed on his shirts and is vigorously using Saint Jacob, while the other is dyeing what remains of his once strawberry blonde hair.

Our announcement last week of the presence of Miss Lullie Mitchell in the neighborhood was a little premature. She did not get here until Friday.

Miss Mamie Lee Wood, one of our most accomplished young ladies is visiting her friend Miss Nisba, daughter of Col. W. C. P. Breckinridge, of Lexington. Miss Mamie will return soon accompanied by Miss Breckinridge, to the delight of her many admirers.

Miss Blanche Norris, the decided belle of Fern Leaf, is spending a few days with Miss Anna Owens.

Miss Minnie Stevenson, of Murphysville, was the pleasant guest of Miss Hattie Cutter Saturday and Sunday.

A little colored boy was drowned last Thursday in town by falling into an uncovered well. Assistance was not tendered him in time to save his life.

We have an unusually fine clippage of hay this year, which is being hurriedly harvested on account of the recent showers ripening it so suddenly. The late spring and heavy rains set the clover and meadows back greatly to the advantage of every farmer. The wheat being out of the way now they are prepared to fill their empty stalls with well cured clover.

We learn that a case of emergency happened one of our friends the other day. Missing one of his short horns from his pasture, he sent out a young cavalry in search, finding him entangled in his neighbor's meadow, where with one last low bellow he had laid down to die.

The fete given by R. C. Durrett, Jr., last Friday night was one of the most enjoyable affairs that has been given here for a long time. Everything was "arranged by our boys too" so that all could have a good time, and under such management how could anything be otherwise than a success. To particularize would be impossible, and to name the prettiest young ladies present would be to enumerate them all, which for the want of space, forbids. But one could not help remarking how tastefully arranged were the numberless Chinese lanterns that encircled their handsome residence, and when a little ways off how strikingly beautiful, like so many distant stars they seemed. It was early morn when the tired guests departed, pronouncing it an occasion long to be remembered. PERSIMMONS.

Ella Sparks and husband to Robert Osborne, 29 acres of land on Lees Creek; consideration $1,100.

THE Democracy of Bracken county have instructed their delegates to the Congressional Convention to vote for James P. Harbeson, of Fleming county: The resolution is as follows:

Resolved, That we, the democracy of Bracken county, in convention assembled, recognize in Jas. P. Harbeson, of Fleming county, a gentleman and a democrat, in every way worthy of the trust and confidence of the democratic party of this district, and of the people, and that our delegates to the convention to meet at Grayson, Carter county, on the 7th day of September 1882, to nominate a candidate for congress be instructed to cast the vote of Bracken county as a unit for him so long as he shall be a candidate before said convention; and said delegates are further instructed to use all honorable means to secure his nomination, and that those delegates attending said convention be authorized to cast the entire vote of the county.

Opening Day of the Great Religious Gathering—Interesting Gossip About People and Things.

From our Special Correspondent.

All is now in readiness to receive the crowds that will gather when the Kentucky Central shall have repaired damages and is again in running order. Somewhere we have heard a proverb that runs after this fashion: "We never appreciate the water until the well runs dry." To one acquainted with Maysville under ordinary circumstances it was quite evident on Tuesday last that the detention of trains was a serious drawback. Frequent, repeated and unjust accusations have been made against this line. We do not appreciate, perhaps, the disadvantages under which the present gentlemanly managers have labored. The detention has, of course, interfered with proceedings here, but soon things will resume their wonted course. Families at present, are coming in by private conveyances.

After needed rest, we have been enabled to make a more careful survey of the many improvements that have been made. The institution has the appearance of being a permanent one. From this center moral influences go out that will tell mightily on the welfare of numbers. Thousands who have tented here whilst pilgrims will finally be congregated in an abode that is permanent. This may be a day of sentiment and latitudinarianism in some quarters, but at this point the design is to make a strong and simple presentation of the grand truths of christianity.

The elegant new auditorium will soon be formally set apart to religious services. Dr. J. B. West, of Nashville, will officiate on this occasion. All who heard his masterly discourses here last year will be eager to hear him again. "We are glad to learn that our own Kentucky bishop, "the old man eloquent," H. H. Kavanaugh, will be present.

Dr. T. J. Dodd, the accomplished scholar and distinguished divine, that we lent to Tennessee for a while, will again be here. Timely notice will be given of any specially interesting services. A noteworthy feature is the "Children's Day." The little ones have not been forgotten. However, prominence has been given to the children's meeting heretofore, but this year arrangements have been made to reach a larger number, and to stir up additional interest in behalf of the young.

In order to a well rounded manhood or womanhood there must be judicious training, mental and moral as well as physical. By to-morrow at least the usual exercises will be resumed. The managers have been unusually pains-taking to secure the services of men who have studied the question which they will discuss. Their sermons and addresses will not be confined to the fortunate ones who gather here. By means of the BULLETIN an intelligent audience all through the country can be reached. The seeds of truth will thus be scattered broadcast and may germinate and bring to maturity abundant fruit. A little effort on the part of those in sympathy with the movement and those who have it immediately in hand will result in much good. The celebrated Talmage and other eminent divines reach thousands through the press that otherwise would never have opportunity to consider their teachings. As special arrangements have been made to present to the public the matured thought of leading Methodist divines it remains to be seen with what favor the enterprise will be received by those who can help in a grand work that is being done in behalf of humanity.

JOTTINGS.

The position of your correspondent for sometime to-day was suggestive of patience sitting on a monument and smiling at grief. Although first here he hopes to remain until the finale.

The genial "Doc." Miller was the second one to pitch his tent. His family accompany him.

Dr. Morris Evans and wife arrived this morning.

Prof. Stevens is here. The music will be all that could be desired.

Miss E. Belle Polk, of Perryville, a very superior alto singer has been secured to assist in the services of this meeting.

Miss Ella Gardiner, of Irvine, also came who will be of great advantage as a soprano singer.

The first bell for the introductory exercises was rung at 2.37 p. m.

Dr. M. Evans conducted the exercises.

He read 39 verses of the 1st chapter of St. John. The choir sang us the opening hymn, No. 177, in Gospel Hymns, "Seek-to Save." Preaching was announced for evening. So the meeting is now formally inaugurated.

PERSONALS.

Points About People Here and Elsewhere.

Mr. B. F. Warnock, of Greenup, is in Maysville to-day.

Mr. Chas. A. Miller, of De Graff, Ohio, is visiting Mr. R. L. Hoeflich.

Mrs. Tillie Schreiber, and Mrs. L. Schreiber, of Cincinnati, are the guests of Col. Fred. Schatzmann.

Miss Ella Belle Hill, of Midway, W. Va. is visiting her relatives, the family of Mr. A. B. Greenwood. She is on her way to Cincinnati to attend the Conservatory of Music.

THAT BIG SHOW.

Look Out for the Street Parade.

On to-morrow (Saturday), the Big U. S. Circus, Museum and the Great Eastern Hippodrome, will pitch their tent in our own town and give two performances—afternoon and evening. This is one of the largest and best conducted shows in America, and is replete with charming novelties and brilliant artists. The street spectacular cavalcade is a sight once in a lifetime, and as a free show is really worth going miles to witness. We advise all to be on hand early and enjoy the sight. In the menagerie is the monster working elephant "Bessie," who is hitched to a plow, and does the work of eight horses, without a seeming exertion; twelve lions, amongst which are the largest and oldest, the smallest and youngest ever put on exhibition. In one cage the monster "Rose" and five cubs, nine days old; in another a she wolf and six cubs, twelve days old, and to crown all the Shetland mare "Minnie" and her colt, ten days old, and about the size of a good spaniel dog; the largest Bengal tiger ever seen in captivity, and the most ponderous living specimen of the Blue Nile hippopotamus on this continent, with an endless variety of gay plumed birds and tribes of monkeys. Don't miss the grand free show on the lot immediately after the street procession.

Ohio has at last awakened to the fact that the United States has a History and that it was necessary for the children to learn something of it. The teachers over there are now lamenting because a new branch has been added to the curriculum of studies and nothing added to their pay.

The Gulf Stream and Europe.

There was a time within the human epoch, says James Geikie, in an article on "The Gulf Stream and the Panama Canal," when the European climate was so genial that many delicate southern species of plants flourished luxuriantly in regions where they cannot now exist. Thus in the neighborhood of Paris, the fig tree, the laurel of the Canary Islands, and other Southern species, found a congenial habitat. The Canary Island laurel does not grow further north now than near Toulon, on the borders of the Mediterranean. It flowers in winter, and repeated frosts would therefore prevent its reproducing its kind. That this plant formerly flourished near Paris is thus a striking proof of changed climatic conditions, for the winters in Northern France must then have been extremely genial. The land and fresh-water shells which were contemporaneous with that remarkable flora in Northwestern Europe tell precisely the same tale, and this is still further illustrated and confirmed by the character of the mammalian fauna. Among the commoner animals at that time occupants of England, France, etc., were hippopotami, elephants, rhinoceroses, lions, tigers, hyenas, etc., and vast numbers of cervine and bovine animals which still occupy the temperate latitudes of Europe.

That such genial climatic conditions were due in large measure to a great increase in the volume of warm water flowing into the North Atlantic seems just as certain as that the Arctic climate of the glacial period was largely induced by a very considerable decrease or even an entire stoppage of that heat-bearing current. The presence of many Mediterranean shells in the ancient raised beaches of Scandinavia, the occurrence of mussel banks in the coast-lands of Spitzbergen, the appearance here and there off the coasts of Scotland, the Faroes and Iceland, of Southern species of shell-fish, and the presence of isolated colonies of Southern mollusks in the Gulf of St. Lawrence, are all indicative of a former much greater influx of warm water into Northern regions than is now the case. Those remarkable colonies of Southern species are living evidence of the last epoch of extremely genial conditions experienced in Northwestern Europe—an epoch during which great forest growths overspread wide regions in the North—covering the British Islands, the inner and outer Hebrides, the Orkneys and the Shetland Islands, all Norway up to the extreme north, and most extensive areas which to-day lie submerged in the sea.

First Temperance Law.

The following extract from Hon. Chas. B. Flood's correspondence to the Cincinnati Enquirer, under the head of "Old Times Politics," shows how Ohio's first temperance legislation under the present Constitution was adopted:

"The passage of the first temperance law afforded an illustration of the want of good faith which not unfrequently shows itself in legislative doings. It requires a majority of the votes of the members elected to each branch of the Legislature to pass a bill, and in all cases the yeas and nays are required. The temperance law was being passed—the yeas and nays were being called—when the Clerk discovered a member, pencil in hand, keeping count of the vote. The member had evidently been drinking, and, although the call was made slowly and distinctively to give the member a chance to keep a correct account, yet he missed it by one vote. When his name was called he did not vote; when called a second time, after all the other members had voted, he did vote, and his vote passed the bill. He thought it required, as it did by his count, two votes to pass it; but, too far gone in his cups to count correctly, it required but one, and when he voted in its favor that one vote was supplied, and the temperance bill was passed. Some of his indignant friends rushed to his seat and rudely demanded that he move a reconsideration, but the demand was made in such a manner as to excite the anger of the member, and he refused. Thus was the first temperance law under the present Constitution passed by the vote of a member in a situation too far gone to count the number of Senators voting."
